Father Michael's Musings

When I was young, I, and just about everybody, really looked forward to the end of the school year and the start of the summer vacation. As a teacher, I came to discover the beauty of that gift all over again.

As the school year ends, we can remember how it felt to have those weeks of freedom stretching before us and perhaps we made no plans on how to use them.

As adults, we can embrace this time in a beautiful way. The weeks ahead are a time of long days and the warmer weather we spent months longing for. How we embrace this gift can make a huge difference in our lives.

Make your plans now on how to enjoy some relaxation during these days, the books to read, the visits to make, the fun to be had. Take long, slow walks and enjoy the gift of green beauty around us.

Greet your neighbors outside planting their gardens and home flowers and pause for a moment to chat. Watch the glorious sunsets before going to bed, alive to the gift of light that blesses us.

These are special days of new life for us all; rejoice in the God who blesses us with such wonder and we can all feel that "school's out" joy again!
